Evolution and Challenges of the Trust Industry

The trust industry: A brave new world

Over the past half-century, the role of trustees has evolved rapidly along with the trust industry itself. We have seen a transition in the investment standards guiding trustees from a “prudent man” using legal lists to a “prudent investor” employing modern portfolio theory. Jurisdictional considerations for a wealthy family have progressed from inter-state to multinational during this time as well; trustees are now required to understand concepts of foreign taxation and foreign property law regimes and remain compliant with strict federal Know Your Customer laws put in place to combat money laundering and terrorist financing.

There has also been an unbundling of the trustee’s role where co-fiduciaries take on the responsibility for directing certain aspects of a trust’s administration in a directed trust. Finally, today’s beneficiaries often request their inheritances in trust to obtain protection from creditors and to minimize transfer taxes by holding inherited assets in trust. These changes have spurred the evolution of the trust industry and presented new challenges to its continued growth and profitability.

Increased complexity of trust investments

Historically, trust laws evolved with the development of the common law as each new fiduciary issue was resolved by the courts. A trustee’s duties and obligations were often determined based upon standards of prudence and loyalty litigated after the fact. The result of judging fiduciary conduct using 20/20 hindsight was that a trustee’s default standards of care were very conservative. Statutes that attempted to modify the common law were strictly construed and, ultimately, may not be enforced by the court if there were appropriate grounds for the court to craft an exception. These circumstances required the trust industry to maintain a very conservative approach.

In the investment realm, the investment process was initially driven by “legal lists” of permissible investments including government bonds and first mortgages. By the 1940s, legal lists were replaced in most states by the prudent man rule which characterized investment in “speculative” stocks, discounted bonds, or buying any securities on margin as presumptively improper. Not until the late 1980s did states begin to repeal their prudent man rules in favor of a prudent investor rule that embraced modern portfolio theory. Until this time, it was generally not seen as prudent to invest in a diverse portfolio of securities.

Modern trust laws require a sophisticated trustee

Trust-friendly laws allowing for directed trustees and perpetual trusts are not new concepts, but their proliferation in recent years and broad acceptance in many states have expanded the scope of trustees who must administer these complex structures. Starting in the mid-1980s, states began to compete for trust business using favorable trust laws as a lure to bring trust assets into their states. Many states began to repeal their common law rules against perpetuities to allow for perpetual trusts and to codify laws allowing the role of the trustee to be unbundled so advisors could direct how the trustee exercised its fiduciary powers, the so-called directed trust. Beginning with Alaska and Delaware in 1997, certain states began to apply spendthrift protections to self-settled trusts allowing for the creation of domestic asset protection trusts. Until this time, wealthy individuals had to use offshore asset protection trusts if they wanted creditor protection while retaining access to their assets.

During this period of evolution in the trust laws, differences in state income tax laws created opportunities for residents of one state to explore the use of personal trusts administered in another trust-friendly state for the purpose of minimizing their overall state income tax burden. The situs of trust administration became a compelling reason to seek a trustee located in a favorable jurisdiction like Delaware, South Dakota, or Alaska. State income tax arbitrage lead to complex trust structures used to minimize taxes upon the recognition or receipt of income (a so-called “ING” trust) so the taxpayer remains a resident of his or her high-tax home state while exporting the assets to a trust in a low or no-tax jurisdiction to limit state income taxes.

One challenge in the trust industry today is distinguishing between complicated trust structures that require a robust trustee who is fairly compensated for these services, versus trusts that may be serviced by a thinly-staffed trustee for the purpose of essentially renting administrative situs in a preferred jurisdiction. Describing and demonstrating the value proposition regarding the services being performed may be a challenge for a corporate trustee because many families face the decision of whom to select as their trustee only once and don’t appreciate the downside to picking the lowest-cost provider. Advisors who regularly counsel families on these decisions understand the value a sophisticated trustee brings and can help families find the right fit. Trustee services are not a commodity because each trust relationship is unique.

Multinational families are utilizing more trusts

A generation ago, inter-state planning was a complicating factor when structuring a family trust. Today, it is common to do trust planning for multinational families impacted by the laws and taxes of multiple countries. The variety of domestic and foreign tax laws involved when planning for the multinational family requires sophisticated tax counsel and a fiduciary partner able to meet the ongoing and evolving demands of these complex trust structures. Some multinational families seek efficient methods for importing their wealth to the United States after their children come to the U.S. for an education and then remain in the U.S. following marriage or to pursue professional opportunities in the states. Others seek a safe-haven for family wealth because their home country may be financially or politically unstable, with the United States seen as the “offshore” jurisdiction of choice. Finally, U.S. estate tax laws encourage the use of trusts to hold U.S.-based real estate by non-resident aliens to avoid U.S. estate taxes upon their death.

Driving forces behind the expansion of the trust industry

As trust and tax laws changed and investments became more complex, successful families sought the services of professional fiduciaries located in favorable jurisdictions who were adept at navigating these complex trust laws and able to take advantage of these modern investment options. The demand for fiduciary services made trust departments an attractive source of revenue to financial institutions and some states began to compete to attract trust assets into their states. Some innovations in trust laws that states used to bring assets into their state (such as perpetual trusts, directed trustees, and self-settled spendthrift trusts (asset protection trusts, or APTs)) made the role of a trustee so complex that only a professional fiduciary skilled at navigating these complex trust laws is able to carry out the basic duties of the fiduciary. However, as the sophistication in the role of the trustee evolved to this point, pricing demands created by fierce competition for this fiduciary business put a strain on operating margins.

While some people improperly view the role of the directed trustee as an easy and passive job, the workload (and sometimes the risk) of the directed trustee is often greater than when a trustee holds all of the duties and responsibilities of a traditional trustee. Each new directed transaction carries with it a unique set of facts. The trustee must ensure that the directed transaction is proper – i.e., the investment is permitted by the trust agreement, it is legal, and the trust qualifies to make the investment. For example, some unique circumstances can arise when a federally-regulated financial institution is directed to invest in a marijuana production business that may be legal under state, but not federal law. The directed trustee must also understand whether it is an accredited investor when directed to purchase securities that are not registered with financial authorities. While the role of the directed trustee may appear passive on paper and in concept, a trustee with a deep bench of fiduciary professionals is required to properly administer most directed trusts.

The industry today

The evolution of the trust industry has highlighted the fact that modern trusts require the services of robust professional trustees adept at navigating complex legal, tax, investment, and regulatory issues. Sophisticated wealth planners demand the use of sophisticated trustees in preferred jurisdictions who have in-house legal, tax, and administrative talent to deliver these complex fiduciary services. One challenge resulting from the proliferation of investment-directed trusts and thinly-staffed trust companies willing to serve as trustee in name only is to put pricing pressure on these services when they are viewed as a commodity in the market. However, trustees with the depth of talent required to administer trusts for multinational families, trusts holding unique investments, or trusts created in support of complex planning goals, may still be paid adequately for their services if they are able to detail and demonstrate the value of their robust fiduciary services. In the end, the trust industry continues to thrive and meet the needs of wealthy multinational families in this brave new world.

The Delaware Trust Infrastructure
By: Todd A. Flubacher

Delaware Trust Conference
October 23, 2019

1. Growth of an Industry. In the last quarter-century, Delaware has experienced exponential growth in its trust industry. In 1996, the State began chartering limited purpose trust companies under new laws that reduced the capital and employee requirements previously applicable to banks and trust companies. This immediately resulted in an influx of Delaware trust company affiliates of major financial institutions seeking to offer their clients the Delaware advantage. In 1997, Delaware enacted the country's second asset protection trust statute (immediately following Alaska). By the end of the late 90's, the stage was set for an expansion of the trust industry over the next 2 decades that few might have predicted. Today, Delaware is widely recognized as the preeminent jurisdiction for trusts. The trust industry has become a vitally important part of Delaware's economy, sustaining hundreds of professionals in the trust management field, including trust officers, fiduciary risk specialists, in-house counsel, tax advisers, accountants, attorneys and other skill positions. It is a mature industry focused on adding those "extra touches" to steady its foundation. Here are just two examples.
 - (a) Competition. Certainly, Delaware is a leader with its innovative laws. However, the last several years have produced a wave of jurisdictions (and even Uniform Laws) that are also evolving to replicate what Delaware has done. But I posit that the reason why clients and their advisers choose Delaware has as much to do with Delaware's trust infrastructure as it does with the laws on the books. Beyond the innovative solutions found in the black letter law, the well-developed infrastructure of Delaware's trust industry provides consistency, reliability, flexibility and depth that is not found anywhere else.
 - (b) The Delaware Trust Conference. In collaboration with the industry, the Delaware Bankers Association hosts the annual Delaware Trust Conference at the Chase Riverfront Center, attracting well-known national speakers and boasting more than 500 attendees (a number that increases every year). There is literally no other Delaware-based conference of its kind that educates and promotes a local industry and attracts out-of-town visitors to our State, including attendees, sponsors and exhibitors, and no other trust jurisdiction has anything like it.
2. Trust Management Minor at UD. The University of Delaware began accredited Trust Management Minor program in the Lerner College of Business. This program was made possible by the efforts and resources of a partnership between the University of Delaware, the Delaware Bankers Association, financial institutions, law firms, accounting firms and the State of Delaware. It provides mentoring and internships within the Delaware trust industry and importantly, will ensure an ongoing supply of well-trained personnel to support the growing industry and ensure that the people providing Delaware trust administration services will be skilled and experienced.

3. The Courts. Of course, Delaware has been the preeminent jurisdiction in the world for businesses to incorporate since the early 1900's. More than one-half of the Fortune 500 companies are incorporated in Delaware and toward the latter half of last century, Delaware also became a favored jurisdiction for alternative entities. Many of the same reasons why businesses have turned to Delaware as their jurisdiction of choice are the same factors that make Delaware so appealing to settlors of trusts.

The Delaware Court of Chancery, the court recognized worldwide for its reputation in corporate and commercial matters, is the same court with primary jurisdiction over Delaware trusts. Matters are presented to sophisticated judges on the Chancery Court who are appointed (not elected) by the Governor of Delaware, at the recommendation of a nominating committee, for 12 year terms. The Chancellor and Vice Chancellors hold the reputation of the Court in the highest regard and are accustomed to routinely deciding cases of national importance. Delaware trust cases are never tried before a jury and cases are appealed directly to the Delaware Supreme Court, also a preeminent court recognized around the world for its thoughtful and sophisticated decisions. Because of Delaware's sizable and experienced bar, litigants in Delaware are generally represented by lawyers who are knowledgeable about trust law issues. Delaware also has a large and long-standing body of trust-related case law. Many of the decisions cited in the major treatises are Delaware cases. Delaware's well-developed jurisprudence addresses many issues with clarity, and assures trustees and trust beneficiaries that they can predict, with a fair degree of certainty, how the Delaware courts likely will rule upon trust law matters.

4. The Law. Answering the needs of trust settlors and beneficiaries, Delaware's trust statutes have gradually developed into a very detailed and clear framework for the body of law that governs trusts. The answers to most questions can be found in Title 12 of the Delaware Code, and if there is an area of uncertainty or concern, it is often addressed with legislative updates. The Estates and Trusts Section of the Delaware State Bar Association maintains a standing legislative drafting committee that proffers new legislation annually. The new laws often respond to issues that require clarification, or the needs of settlors and beneficiaries. Delaware's legislature is quick to react to new developments and respond to concerns, and has attempted to create flexible trust laws that are best able to effectuate the wishes of trust settlors and meet the needs of trust beneficiaries.

Many of the statutes enacted over the past 2 decades have been followed by other jurisdictions throughout the country and the notable developments are too numerous to recount. For example, Delaware's directed trust statute is inarguably the most successfully implemented directed trust regime in the country and has been copied by many jurisdictions. It is functionally the model for the Uniform Directed Trust Act that is being finalized by the Uniform Laws Commission. Delaware enacted the country's very first total return unitrust statute in 2000, and I could go on and on with other examples, like Delaware's statutes addressing decanting, merger, non-judicial settlement agreements, pet trusts and purpose trusts, designated representatives, pre-mortem validation, silent trusts, etc.

5. The Trust Companies. Today, Delaware boasts over 60 trust companies, most of which are affiliates of the largest, most recognizable financial institutions in the world. This critical mass of corporate fiduciaries provides plenty of alternatives for clients and ensures that the trust infrastructure remains robust. The many prominent financial institutions that have invested in Delaware, and are committed to the continued success of the industry, provide solid stewardship, ensure stability and secure Delaware's future success as a trust jurisdiction.
6. Why Choose Delaware? There are many scorecards in the form of charts, comparisons and rankings that compare Delaware's laws to other jurisdictions, but I believe the following factors are vitally important to consider when choosing among trust jurisdictions:
 - Responsiveness and efficiency of the jurisdiction's legislature and the quality of updates
 - Stability of the trust industry and the reliability of the State's long-term commitment to the industry
 - Quality of the court system
 - Quality of the judges, how are they appointed/elected, and length of term
 - Depth, breadth and quality of case law
 - History and experience of the trust industry and its professional support infrastructure
 - Different drafting styles
 - Quality and depth of legal counsel
 - Variety of options among trust companies and number and diversity of high quality options now and in the future
 - Availability and stability of experienced, high-quality, well-trained trust officers and other trust professionals
 - Different trust administration practices
 - Taxation of trusts

TRUST AND ESTATE SERVICES

Trust Comparisons

Delaware enjoys international renown for its trust and tax law advantages and its innovative estate planning vehicles. Even if you don't live in Delaware, there are numerous reasons why you should consider establishing a new trust in Delaware and why you should explore moving an existing trust to the First State.

Establish Your Trust in the Right State, the First State

Delaware is called the First State because it was the first to ratify the U.S. Constitution. Delaware is also the First State when determining which jurisdiction is the best for your clients' personal trusts. It was the first state to pioneer many innovative trust laws and the infrastructure supporting personal trusts in Delaware is unmatched. Some of the advances started in Delaware include:

- Delaware created the "directed trust" early in the twentieth century by bifurcating trust duties between corporate trustees and investment advisers
- Delaware's Supreme Court and its Court of Chancery, both known for their corporate law opinions, have rendered many of the country's early trust decisions and a number of key trust decisions in more recent years
- Delaware enacted the prudent investor rule in 1986, several years before the 1994 promulgation of the Uniform Prudent Investor Act (UPIA)
- Delaware and Alaska were the first states to allow the domestic asset protection trust (APT) in 1997
- In 2001, Delaware became the first state to enact a total return unitrust-conversion statute
- Delaware enacted a noncharitable purpose trust statute in 2006 and for several years Delaware was the only state in which such a trust could be perpetual
- In 2016, Delaware adopted the lowest premium tax rate in the United States—0%—for large private-placement life-insurance policies

The chart on page two comparing leading trust-friendly jurisdictions shows why Delaware is recognized nationally and internationally as the First State, and the best state, when comparing personal trust jurisdictions.

Notes:

* This chart summarizes the common statutory methods available for modifying irrevocable trusts, including decanting, trust merger, modifications by consent, and non-judicial settlement agreements (NJSA).

 An "NJSA wrapper" is a tool whereby interested parties use a NJSA to appoint a trustee, grant a trustee a power, direct another trustee not to exercise that power, and/or address the liability and compensation of the trustees.

*This chart discusses statutes that allow parties to a trust (sometimes only with court approval) to generally modify the terms of an irrevocable trust. Most of these statutes are a version of UTC Section 411 adopted by a particular state. This chart does not cover states that permit trust modification based on a change of circumstances (e.g. UTC Section 412, cy pres (e.g. UTC 413), or in other specific circumstances and does not incorporate those states that have an NJSA statute that expressly allows an NJSA to modify a trust.

Notes:

* An "NJSA wrapper" is a tool whereby interested parties use a NJSA to appoint a trustee, grant a trustee a power, direct another trustee not to exercise that power, and address the liability and compensation of the trustees.

 Some NJSA statutes expressly provide that the NJSA may be used to modify the terms of an irrevocable trust.

 A notation that a state uses the "UTC definition" of interested person means that the state has a statute modeled after the UTC that defines interested persons to be those persons whose consent would be required in order to achieve a binding settlement were the settlement to be approved by the court.

Notes:

* This Chart summarizes directed trust statutes, which allow someone other than the trustee to possess responsibilities and liabilities traditionally associated with the trustee function.

 The term "off-the-track" refers to a statute that provides a detailed statutory rubric that outlines the specific role and responsibilities of the direction adviser – usually an investment adviser and/or distribution adviser – and sometimes require adherence to statutory language to fall within the protections of the statute.

 The term "enabling" refers to a statute that provides for an open architecture design, which relies heavily on the drafting of the governing instrument and could provide greater flexibility while remaining under the protection of the statute (such as permitting direction for functions beyond investments, distributions or a defined set of trust protector responsibilities).

* UTC §808 refers to a statute that is substantially similar to Uniform Trust Code Section 808.
